And as always: Electrostimulation is NOT dangerous but you need to observe a few basic rules:

- Always apply the “never-above-the-belt-rule”. (Above the belt, you should use only special toys suitable for this purpose such as e.g. our bipolar nipple clamps.
- Persons with electronic or metal implants (e.g. pacemakers) must not use stimulation current without first consulting their physician. The same goes for persons with heart deficiencies or cardiac irregularities.

- People suffering from epilepsy must not use stimulation current without first consulting a physician.
- With metal contraceptive methods like a copper coil or copper chain, you must use stimulation current only after consulting a physician or the manufacturer of the respective implant.
- Stimulation must never be done so that current flows through the brain or heart.
- Never stimulate the larynx or throat area. Muscular cramps in this area can lead to choking.
- Stimulation current devices must never be used near explosive or flammable materials.
- Stimulation current must not be used while operating vehicles or other heavy machinery.
- Stimulation current must not be used during pregnancy.
- Stimulation current must be used only on healthy skin.
- Keep away from children.
- We are not liable for malfunctioning accessories of third-party suppliers.
- Never screw Mystim toys apart because this will destroy the internal parts and void your warranty claim.
